A great deal of street grading was don in Helena last year and a great deal more | INDEPENDENT. will have to be done this year. Not alone will new grades have to be established, and they probably will be. The grade on Benton avenue, it is claimed, has been such useless changes that caused the citizens to condemn the work and call a meetfor the purpose of getting expressions of opinion from residents alorg Benton avenue and in the vicinity.

Quite a number assembled at Payne's holel yesterday forenoon. City Engineer Miller was present by request. What was best to be done was discussed. The ground where the filling in was going on was visited. Engineer Miller condemned the work and said it never should have been attempted. It was decided to wait upon the committee on street grading and ask them to order the work discontinued until the mat-ter could be brought before the council. This will necessitate a large removed. This will necessitate a large expenditure of money, and the wish is expressed that if the present city engineer reestablish grades on certain streets—and they should be re-established—he will study the contour of the land and have his grades conform with surrounding points.

SWITCHMEN ORGANIZE. A Branch of the National Order Established in Helena. A branch of the Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association of North America has been organized in this city with twenty charter members. The switchmen of the country form one of the strongest and largest organizations in existence, their membership at the present time being the public. For some time inferior men the public. For some time inferior men have sought and obtained these responsible positions, who only remain in one place a month or two and upon skipping out leave many unpaid accounts, and rarely pay their board bills. The result is that the better members of the craft are placed in the same category. The Helena union will be known as Mount Helena Lodge No. 92, and in the future only honorable and competent men will find recognition within its ranks. The lodge was instituted by John Downey, of Chicago, chief organizer and financial secretary of the grand lodge. His horse was so skittish he could not get near him. Before the boy reached the place a wagon was driven up, the man placed in it and taken off. Mr. Quirk learned afterwards that the man had been thrown from a horse and quite severely hort, but he could ascertain neither the man's name nor the extent of his injuries neither the

The driver for Kinna & Son's hardware house met with quite an accident yesterday. He had a ladder in the wagon which projected at both ends. Fred Warde in "The Mountebank." "The Mountebank" is the product of a vigorous and versatile intellect, and one which comprehended the human passions fully. Tragedy and comedy were never more skillfully made to work together. The part of Belphe or being so grand in conception, its portrayal must needs require a grand mind, and such a mind has fred Warde. The author would certainly have been pleased with Mr. Warde's presentation of the character, as the audience was delighted last night. But it should be borne in mind that it is not the habit of the Plumed Knight when he is smitten on the cheek to adhere to the scriptural injunction and turn the other meekly to his assailant. The history of Mr. Blaine's political career shows no par-allel to his present course. If anything, he used to err in being too quick to resent an used to err in being too quick to resent an injury or affront when a more pacific poli-cy would have been advisable. There are many reasons given for Mr. Blaine's change of tactics. It may be that he has acquired more discretion with his experience, and is nly biding his time to make the blow he more effective when he is ready to strike.

That the relations between Mr. Blaine and Mr. Harrison are, to put it mildly, "strained," does not admit of a doubt.

One is constantly hearing in the hotel corridors and places where the politicians congregate Mr. Blaine referred to as a caged lion, and as a man who has found his master. He is also compared to Mr. Bayard. These comments come mostly from well-known anti-Blaine people, but they are apparently encouraged by the administration.

A gentleman who is in a position to be well informed made the rather startling well informed made the rather startling s stement that Mr. Blaine's wishes had not been followed in a single case in the mat-ter of any foreign appointments of promi-nence or in any other matter concerning the shaping of the policy of the adminis-

"I mean," he added, "that Mr. Blaine has not had his own way. Some of his friends have received appointments, but none of them have got just what he wantd. The case of Mr. Reid is the extent of tration that can be made of the extent of the 'pull' Mr. Blaine has with Mr. Harrison. Mr. Reid, as is well known, was exceedingly anxious to go to England. It is the one place he has coveted for years. Mr. Reid's wishes were communicated to Mr. Blaine some time before the inauguration Blaine some time before the inauguration mask what he believed to be a foul plot.

Where did the money come from that the plot? Heid's wishes were communicated to Mr. Blaine some time before the inauguration and Mr. Blaine practically promised Mr. Reid the appointment. He did his best to deliver the goods, and even went so far, I am told, as to make the request for the appointment of Mr. Reid to the English mission a personal matter. If there was one man that Mr. Blaine was in duty bound to make a fight for it was keid, and yet he did

Mr. Harri. sending Mr. Reid to England, Mr. Harri son remarked with quiet irony that he was sorry as he had decided to offer the appointment to the son of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Reid, Mr. Harrison said, might go to France. Mr. Harrison refused to listen to any arguments, as he said his mind was made up. Mr. Reid was, 1 am informed, made up. Mr. Reid was, I am informed, highly indignant when informed of the president's intentions. Mr. Harrison's conduct was regarded as little short of treachery. At first, Mr. Reid refused point blank to entertain the proffer of the French mission. Just what arguments were employed to induce him to change his mind are not known, but it is believed that Mr. Blaine appealed to him to accept to save him (Blaine) from embarrassment. Thomas W. Palmer, who goes to Spain and was honored with heading the list of the first appointments of the president, has the first appointments of the president, has been outspoken in his antagonism to Blaine, and in 1884 he went to Chicago and worked against him. Edwin H. Terreil, of Texas, minister to Belgium, was absolutely unknown to the secretary of state before Mr. Harrison sent his name to the senate. He was born in Indiana, however, and was a classmate of Mr. Harrison at

been administered to Mr. Biaine by Mr. Harrison was in the selection of the members of the South American commission. This was Mr. Biaine's pet scheme. He originated it when he was secretary of state under Garfield, and revived it again when he got back to the state department. He gave Mr. Harrison a list of names for the commission, but only one on his list was among the names Mr. Harrison sent to the senate and that was William H. Tres. the senate, and that was William H. The slaughtering of Mr. Blaine's commissioners was even more deadly than the destruction of Roman Proconsuls in the inaugural message of Mr. Harrison's grandfather by Mr. Webster. Estee and Trescott are about the only known friends of Mr. Blaine on the commission. There was nothing that Mr. Blaine took a deeper personal interest in than in this commission, and that he should be allowed to have so little voice in its formation must have so little voice in its formation must have been as humiliating as it was disappointing to Mr. Biaine."
